Heat Exhaustion & Bee Sting Scenario

Scenario: On an 85° June day, the scouts in the troop are at 2nd Class Park playing soccer, while the unit leaders are having a meeting inside the park’s scout building. The patrol leader notices a scout with a lack of energy and sweating profusely. The patrol leader knows the scout did not drink a lot of water and approaches the scout. The scout states he is weak and has a slight headache. The scout’s skin is cool, pale, and moist and he has a rapid pulse.

The patrol leader sends another scout to get something to drink and ice. While getting it, the scout is stung by a wasp on the top of his right hand. The scout has no known allergies to bee stings. The stinger is still embedded.
